Maryland is among the 17 states at “high risk” of having its election results compromised due to problems associated with paperless touchscreen voting machines (a.k.a. direct recording equipment or DREs) according to Common Cause. See the full report entitled, Election Reform: Malfunction and Malfeasance: A Report on the Electronic Voting Machine Debacle, published June 2006.